

NEWSLETTER MARCH 2017

CHAIRMAN'S MESSAGE

We are constantly being bombarded by media reports that the NHS is falling apart at the seams and needs a massive cash injection that the country cannot afford. I suspect that the truth is that the organisation is struggling to cope with increasing demand at a time when money and resources are tight. Nonetheless on an almost daily basis I hear of people in need of medical help who cannot speak highly enough of the service and professionalism of the services in our region.

I do have one solution to help the funding situation. Doctors should provide U3A membership on prescription as a more cost effective means of health improvement. Your U3A offers physical activity in the form of walking, gardening and more general visits which involve exercise. Your mental well being is well served with meditation and psychology. We are always told 'use it or lose it' and there are a host of activities, such as bridge, creative writing and languages that will help stir the old grey matter.

Most important is the social activity that belonging to our U3A brings. Irrespective of which groups you belong to, or which meetings and events you attend, you find yourself amongst like minded people. There is something on offer virtually every day of the week so you should never feel alone and isolated, and if you are unable to get out for some reason our welfare and communications team will keep you in touch.

Colin Burkitt Chairman

WALKING GROUP

FRIDAY 17th MARCH 2017

Colin will lead a circular walk from Lower Heswall of about six miles. We walk from Lower Heswall up through Heswall Dales and along the path to Thurstaston church with great views over the Dee estuary.

We will stop at Thurstaston Visitor centre for toilets and a short break. There are tables and chairs which we can use inside the building if the weather is not good enough to sit outside, but there is no café so bring your own. We return to Lower Heswall via the Wirral Way to our lunch venue (the Black Horse hotel) arriving at about 2pm.

The terrain is varied, footpaths, farm tracks, lanes and a little road walking. There is one hill, with steps up, and some footpaths may be a bit muddy after rain. There is one small stone stile en route.

We meet in Lower Heswall outside the church – opposite the Black Horse Hotel @10-30am

There is parking along the road, outside the shops in Lower Heswall, or in the road which runs up the hill immediately to the side of the pub. Do not park in the bays outside the church hall as parking here is limited to 2 hours.

THE PUB HAS ASKED US TO PRE ORDER MEALS - see the sign in sheet for menu and order form.

THORNTON HOUGH WALK FRIDAY 17th February 2017

Many thanks to Dave & Pauline for leading this very enjoyable walk.

Has it arrived?

If you are reading this the likelihood is that you have survived the winter; congratulations! Now I know that March is not necessarily the warmest and sunniest of months but we can at least convince ourselves that the worst is behind us; though statistically it is more likely to snow at Easter than at Christmas! Looking back to the days when we used to plan family picnics at Easter I tend to remember most the cramped interiors of cars in which the view of the sublime countryside was obscured on the inside by massive condensation and on the outside by low clouds bearing rain, sleet and snow. I have a clear memory of daffodils being bowed down under a white blanket.

But looking on the bright side, March is the month of the Vernal Equinox and the days are clearly getting longer, offering us more light than dark from now on. Even way back in February I found myself doing odd jobs in the garden after five in the evening and getting excited about snowdrops. Is it not strange that spring always seems to come as a surprise? At least to me it does; and having seen over eighty of them I really ought to know better. I look for every sign – each opening bud and sprouting bulb. On this score there is every justification for a degree of anxiety. Though it is likely that most of the garden will have survived our relatively warm winters, things will not necessarily have escaped the depredations of ravaging squirrels. They like yellow crocus corms, hyacinth bulbs and apple tree bark, amongst other items and our only hope is to fill them so full with nuts and seeds that there will be no room left in their stomachs for the more choice items. They run a highly successful protection scam. If we do not give them all they demand in the feeders it will be the worse for us. People who look to nature for Edenic paradigms will be presented with some very dubious models. The squirrels were there long before the Mafia.

Squirrels do not bother with begonias so if these adaptable plants survive the winter, and a few always do, we can have them to ourselves. Monty Don assures us that no self respecting gardener would entertain a begonia. He is, of course entitled to his opinion, well supported as it is by various collaborators. That does not prevent him from being wrong – at least in my case. Slugs do not like begonias either and in our garden we have slugs the size of putative anacondas who view all my efforts to grow things as a side-salad. We are also in deep shade. Begonias happily put up with all of this and just keep flowering. The moral of this tale is that we should have the courage to do what works for us regardless of fashion and ‘enlightened’ opinion. One friend assures me that there are other more interesting and worthwhile plants that will grow in shade. Yes indeed there are. You have to send away for them or travel for miles, burning fuel and when you get them home they might, with luck, flower for a month. I can buy begonias at Aldi.

This is not intended to be a gardening column but rather an exhortation to pragmatic realism. I am talking to myself really, reminding myself to have the courage to do what is right for me. One can learn a great deal from a begonia.

U3A OUTING THURSDAY 9th FEBRUARY 2017

On a cold, cloudy but dry February morning, a group of U3A members took a bus from Liverpool city centre to Princes Road Synagogue at the city boundary with Toxteth.

After elevenses and the chance to admire the impressive Minton floor tiles in the entrance hall, we were taken into the synagogue itself by our friendly and knowledgeable lady guide who, for the next hour, explained the history of the building.

Opened in 1874 by the members of the Liverpool Old Hebrew Congregation, it is one of three synagogues in the city, along with those in Allerton and Childwall. The grade I listed building is one of only three cast iron framed buildings in Liverpool. The others being the parish churches of Everton and St-Michael's-in-the-Hamlet (both subjects of previous U3A visits). The building was designed by the Audsley Brothers who trawled the globe for inspiration and eventually produced an eclectic design which is predominately 'Moorish Revival' in style. The interior decorative work is very ornate and is awash with gold leaf and brilliant colours. We were shown the Bimah (reader's desk) and the Ark of the Covenant and Holy of Holies which contain the Ten Commandments and the scroll detailing the laws.

Both men and women sing in the choir and girls as well as boys celebrate their Barmitzvah at the age of 13.

After leaving soon after mid-day it was a short walk to the massive sandstone pile of the Anglican Cathedral in Hope Street and lunch in the refectory there. Suitably fortified we were ready for another guided tour! Our equally friendly and knowledgeable guide (Brian) conducted us round this awe inspiring Grade I listed building which is the fifth largest cathedral in the world, It houses the world's largest working organ with over 10,000 pipes (the organ in New York with over 20,000 pipes keeps failing !)

Designed by Giles Gilbert Scott (of red telephone box fame) who won the competition at a young age, the dimensions of the building are stupendous in length, breadth, and height. The famous tower commands views over the surrounding area and, as Oxton U3A members well know, can be seen from most parts of the Wirral, North Wales and South Lancashire.

The building was constructed between 1904 and 1978 which meant that building work was interrupted by both world wars. Sadly but predictably, many of the skilled masons did not return from WW1 and there is a suitable memorial to them. By 1978 Woolton quarry, which supplied the sandstone, was worked out and it was necessary to look elsewhere to supply the additional stone to finally complete the building.

Memorials to previous Bishops of Liverpool include an unusual sculpture in the shape of a cricket field as a tribute to the late David Shepherd, former England batsman who with Archbishop Derek Worlock of the Metropolitan Cathedral did much to bring the faith communities together.

As the building was quiet with only a scattering of visitors, Brian took the opportunity to venture into normally unexplored corners such as the Chapter House where some official business is done and the Children's Chapel which has a moving sculpture of The Holy Family, inspired by the contours of a Lake District mountain.

As always, our thanks to the Barbaras for organising the day.

Paul Cullen
